

Understanding your professional style will help you navigate through the career reinvention process with a greater degree of self-awareness. In today's business world, it's important to align yourself with a company that will allow you to maximize your strengths, capabilities and talents. Let's take a closer look.

- Are you an introvert or an extrovert?
- Do you prefer to lead from within a group or do you prefer to be out in front? Do you enjoy being around larger or smaller groups?
- Do you prefer a private office or an open work environment?

There are no wrong answers to these questions because a successful company culture is dependent on both introverts and extroverts.

Do you prefer to single task or multi task? Why do you prefer this style?

Do you prefer to self-manage or be managed by someone else? Why?

Are you an implicit (tend to keep your thoughts and opinions to yourself) or an explicit communicator (easily share your thoughts and opinions)? How does your preferred style serve you?
