

The Trigger Word Catcher Exercise

For this exercise you can write down all the bad advice you've gotten over the years, the ill conceived warnings and instructions and the ones that have cost you the most. Write down what they cost you. When you see these formal descriptions of bad advice you've received, you'll understand that you no longer can allow someone's unqualified advice to steer the direction of your life. Create this new habit of ignoring bad advice and instead getting good advice from qualified people and diminish your internal villain in order to gain a new level of confidence.
